The Continuation of Pamela the Second.

Mrs. COUPLER and PAMELA.

Mrs. Coupler.

Amela, Pamela, you know nothing of the World: What Woman, beſides yourſelf, would raiſe ſuch idle Scruples, when ſhe had ſuch an Opportunity of making her Fortune?——If you can get the 'Squire, What does it ſignify, though he in a little time ſhould prove Inconſtant?——He may think he has a bad Bargain; but then he muſt put up with it, Child; he cannot take away your Settlement. And let me tell you, at any Rate, if there ſhould be a little Repentance, as the Poet ſays,

'Tis ſweet repenting in a Coach and Six.

Pam. All theſe Things, Mrs. Coupler, you have ſaid over and over: I have never, indeed, conſider'd of them with that due Reflection as I have lately. You know, for I have confeſs'd it to you, that whoever had my Perſon, William only could have my Heart. In ſhort, Mrs. Coupler, I don't think of proceeding any farther in this Affair. I have every Day a perplex'd Part to act, and am tir'd of putting on a feign'd Character, by being tolerable civil to the 'Squire.

Mrs. Coup. Feign'd Character!——Pſhaw!——you do no more than what a great Number of thoſe who are call'd fine Ladies act every Day of their Lives.——I have liv'd in Noblemens Families, and ſeen the Beau Monde; and do you imagine there are not feign'd Characters among them?——Mercy on your Simplicity!——I have ſeen a Dutcheſs all Complaiſance to a Duke ſhe wiſh'd at the——World's End.——Lady Modely was always talking of her Virtue, yet was never without an Intrigue on her Hands. Miſs Prudda could not bear the Sight of the odious Creature Man; yet I know the Midwife where ſhe was a whole Month; at the ſame time ſhe gave out ſhe was gone to ſee a Country Friend. I remember that Miſs Forward had a hundred pretty Fellows after her; receiv'd them at Breakfaſt in Bed; went to the Maſquerade, and would do every thing but the laſt.——My Dear, you are not upon the Square with the World if you always ſeem what you really are.——By appearing what you are not, is the way to ſucceed in the World.

Pam. I am as much oblig'd to you for this inſtructive Lecture as all my others; and I will go into my own Room and meditate on it.

Mrs. Coup. Then let your Meditation be but ſhort before you reſolve; for my Maſter has been enquiring after you, and I expect he will be aſking again for you preſently; and pray, Pamela, behave to his Honour with that Prudence and Diſcretion as may be for your Intereſt.——I ſhall find you then in your Room if I want you. [Exit.

Pam. I'm going there immediately.——

What a Woman is this when I recollect her whole Behaviour!——An artful, naughty Woman, brought lately from London, and I find knows all the Ways of it.——How many Stories has ſhe told me of Intrigues carry'd on in the Gentlemen and Noblemens Families where ſhe liv'd: And while my Lord and my Lady had their Amours, the Valet de Chambre and the Chamber-Maids, the Butler, Footman and the other Servants had theirs: So that a very faſhionable Family was no better than a Brothel-Houſe.——But ſuch will be the Practice of Servants, when ſuch is the Example their Maſters and Miſtreſſes ſet before them.——What has this Reflection rais'd in my Mind!——that there may be ſcandalous Amours in the Country as well as London.——Let me not then ſtay in this Place of Danger, and run the Hazard of being compell'd into Guilt; for how can I tell how far the Violence of my Maſter's Paſſion may carry him. O, William! William! if you keep but your Word of meeting me at the Garden Gate, this Day is the laſt I will ſtay in this Houſe.

Black-Ey'd Suſan.

O William! as I've heard you ſay,
To ſteer the Ships aright at Sea,
A faithful Needle points the Way,
Fix'd to the Pole by Sympathy.
Sailors, 'midſt Dangers both of Wave and Wind,
From ſuch ſtrange Conſtancy their Safety find.

O, William! William! could thy Heart
Feel the ſame Love as glows in mine!
It would ſuch Sympathy impart
As too fond Hearts again rejoin.
Amid my Dangers, haſte, O faithful Youth!
And let me date my Safety from thy Truth.

[Exit.

Scene changes. The 'Squire and Mrs. Coupler.

'Squ. You ſaid ſhe would be in her Room, Mrs. Coupler.

Mrs. Coup. She ſaid ſo; but I find ſhe is juſt gone into the Garden, and from ſome Circumſtances am apprehenſive ſhe intends to leave us abruptly.

'Squ. What d'ye mean?

Mrs. Coup. One of the Maids, a Confident of hers, has intimated as much.

'Squ. You ſay ſhe is juſt now gone into the Garden.

Coup. Yes, Sir, John the Gardener told me ſo.

'Squ. 'Tis very well:——I myſelf will follow her.——Do you obſerve my Directions. [Exit Coupler.

After a Pauſe.] 'Squ. What is the Meaning of this? I am reſtrain'd in a Manner which affects me!——Compulſion is not Love;——it never can produce it.——I am rivall'd!——By whom?——A Miller!——What then? Then I find it is not ſo eaſy for Men of Fortune to gain Conqueſts over Country Girls, as I imagin'd.——Love among Country Maids is bred rather by an Equality of Station, a Familiarity of Converſe, the Freedoms of Paſtime, and a thouſand other little Circumſtances.——Therefore the Girl has an Awe upon her from my being her Maſter:——That Awe I muſt get the better of by a compulſive Familiarity.

When Female Hearts no other Means can move,
Compulſion pleaſes, and they're forc'd to love.

[Exit.

Scene changes to the Garden.

Pam. Thank Heaven! William is faithful to his Word; I ſhall now be releas'd from my Dangers: Here, at the Garden Door, he was to meet me with his Horſe. [She opens the Door.] But why does he ſtay ſo long? How tedious are the Moments of Impatience!

Enter the 'Squire.

'Squ. Yes, my Dear, moſt Lovers think ſo when they have an Appointment.——Is that your Caſe, Pamela?

Pam. O Heavens! What ſhall I do now?

'Squ. What is the Matter? you ſeem confus'd; you are ſurpriz'd at my catching you here:——Hah! the Garden Door open!——What is the Meaning of this?

Pam. Since I am diſcover'd I will not conceal my Deſign; which was, Sir, to leave your Houſe and Family, ſince I could not ſtay in it with Honour.

'Squ. With Honour!——You give yourſelf, Child, all the Airs of a Woman of Qual at St. James's: But, my Dear, before you go, I have a great deal to ſay to you. This Coyneſs of yours muſt be flung off a little; and when you are leſs reſerv'd, you will think yourſelf in leſs Danger. That Summer houſe may give you an Opportunity of being convinc'd of your Error, and my Love. Come, come——Nay, no ſtruggling, for I am determin'd you ſhall go.

Pam. For God-ſake! Sir, let me go: What do you mean?

'Squ. You ſhall know there, Child:——All your reſiſting is in vain.——

Pam. Nay, then I have only this Remedy.——Help, Help, Murder, Help! [Shrieks out.

'Squ. There is no Help near——

Enter William, at the Garden Gate.

Will. But there is, thou barbarous, baſe Man: Let go the Girl, or I'll fell you to the Ground with my Quarter-Staff.

'Squ. Who art thou? ſome Ruffian come to rob me!

Pam. No, Sir, one come to prevent your committing a Robbery of the baſeſt Nature: It is an honeſt Man, come to ſhew his Love by delivering me from your ungenerous Deſign.

Will. Your Honour ſeems confounded; and well you may: Had I treated you as you deſerv'd, I ſhould have given you no Quarter.——What can you ſay to juſtify your Conduct?——You are ſaid to be good-natur'd and generous; Does this Act agree with thoſe Characters?——Was this Attempt to be divulg'd, who in the Country would eſteem you any other than a Rake and a Scoundrel?——You appear abaſh'd; and I hope you begin to think you have acted wrong: Take my plain, homeſpun Advice: Though you are a very fine Gentleman, learn to mend your Manners:——Farewell——Come Pamela——

'Squ. Stay a Moment——I have acted wrong——I am ſenſible of it. Take Pamela home; I would not have her ſtay here longer.——To make an Atonement, if you keep this a Secret, I will preſent you with a hundred Guineas on your Wedding Day.

And Pamela ſhall find, for Vice abhorr'd,
That Female Virtue brings it's own Reward.

The DOMESTICK INTELLIGENCER.

Monday, May 3. Cocoa-tree, Pall-Mall.

Private Intelligence from St. ——— has given the Politicians of this Place, who are in their Country's Intereſt, new Spirits. Great Alterations are talk'd of: A Noble D—— who reſign'd, is again expected to be re-inſtated in his Poſts, and in the C—nc—l.——Lord C———m is to have a Regiment of Horſe.——Several Removes and Promotions have been made here, which may not be ſo proper to mention till we have the Authority of a Gazette.

Tueſday. Tilt-yard, Whitehall.

The Firſt Battalion of the Firſt Regiment of Guards is to go to Flanders entire; and it is ſaid, that if the Britiſh Forces take the Field, his Highneſs the Duke, who is Colonel of the Regiment, will take on him the Command, according to his Rank in the Army.

Wedneſday. Tom's, Cornhill.

We have receiv'd Advice here from Whitefield's Tabernacle near Moorfields, of an Incident which is very extraordinary, and may be thought diverting: A poor Weaver, who had the Misfortune of being married to one of Whitefield's Saints, was the other Day rummaging his Closet, and found two Pieces of Gold conceal'd very artfully: He enclos'd two Pieces of Copper in the same Paper he found the Guineas, and left them in the same Place. Last Sunday the pious Dame, after her Saint had expounded, made him her Gold Offering, he bless'd her for not forgetting Sion, and graciously dismiss'd her.——She had not gone far before the inquisitive Saint, as soon as he had taken the Cloak off the Pieces, found they were of the wrong Complexion: He call'd his Votary back, and raling her soundly for mocking GOD; she begg'd Forgiveness, testifying Surprize, declaring solemnly she had cover'd Gold with that Paper, and how the Pieces became Copper she could not tell unless the Devil had done it. ——' The Devil, crys the Expositor, No, No, you ' are a false, scandalous, infamous Woman:—— ' Come no more into the Assembly.——Profane not ' the Society of the Godly.——Avaunt:——Go and ' be d——d for a Sinner as you are.

The poor deluded Creature, stung with his Reproaches, went home, and fell into Fits, which her Husband brought her out of by the Strappado; and when he had recover'd her, told her that he had taken the Saints Offering, and offer'd it up to his Landlord: The poor Fellow is now in hopes, as his Wife is no longer a Saint, he may be able to pay his Rent.

Thursday. St. James's Coffee-house.

A Courier is said to have arriv'd last Night at the Secretary's-Office with Dispatches of great Importance. Certain it is, that a M——r of S——e said to-day, at Court, That some very good News was receiv'd, which the Publick would soon know.——The Adepts in Politicks all agree that it must relate to Affairs in Germany: Some think that his Pr—ss—n Majesty is come over to the Queen of Hungary: Others have other Sentiments.——Whatever the Secret is a little Patience will make it publick.

Friday. L—d—y of the H—— of C——s.

The select Vestrymen of Westminster who are attending, are struck into a Pannick; for the C——ee of Enq—ry into the Abuses of select Vestries, committed last Night a Grocer in St. James's-street to Newgate. ——Publick Oppressors of all Kinds ought to meet their just Reward.——The more a Nation punishes publick Crimes, the more it has of publick Virtues.

Dick's, Temple-Bar.

The following Copy of Verses were read last Night in this Place, and met with Approbation.

On Miss CHIARA POSTERLA'S Singing, in Trinity-College Hall.

NAture has giv'n all Creatures Sense
To stand upon their own Defence:
Man can, with various Weapons, fight;
The Horse can kick, the Dog can bite;
But (let Anacreon be believ'd)
What is a Wound from these receiv'd,
To that the heedless Lover feels
When with one Glace Chiara kills?
A Form so exquisitely fair,
So soft, so negligent an Air,
Could Cleopatra ever boast,
Tho' to gain Her a World was lost.
But when the smooth Italian Song
Trembles mellifluous from her Tongue,
Smother the lurking Seeds of Love,
Lest this sweet Rose a Thorn should prove *:
Not half so sweet could Orpheus sing
To his Harp's gently-tinkling String;
Tho' ev'n the Gods from Heav'n descended,
And on his Melody attended.
If Beauty's Charms appear so glorious;
If Musick too is so victorious;
If each of these is so respected,
That for them Worlds, nay, Heav'n's rejected;
If such Regard is paid to either,
What then is due to both together?

* Alluding to the Song she sung, Lascia la Spina cogli la Rosa.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Moscow, April 10. The Counts Charles and Gustavus de Biron, with the late Duke of Courland and all his Family, are arriv'd here from Siberia. It is given out that the latter has been sent for in order to give the Empress some Light into certain Transactions, for which the Prince and Princess of Brunswick are still detain'd at Riga.

Petersbourgh, April 17. The Court of Sweden having propoled to the Empress to renew the Suspension of Arms, her Imperial Majesty's Ministers have returned the following Answer to that Proposal. ' The Em- ' press, at her Accession to the Throne, gave Proofs ' of the Sincerity of her Intentions to live in Peace with ' her Neighbours. With this View she began a Ne- ' gotiation with the Court of Sweden, tending to put ' an End to the War between the two Powers. That ' Negotiation having proved fruitless, the provisional ' Suspension of Arms agreed upon ceased, and made ' Way for renewing Hostilities on both Sides. Her ' Imperial Majesty is, nevertheless, in the same Dispo- ' sitions as when she ascended the Throne. It depends ' on Sweden to improve them, by relinquishing all her ' Claims to the Provinces conquer'd by the Emperor ' Peter the First. His Memory is held in too great Ve- ' neration by all the World, it is too glorious and too ' dear to the Empress, as well as to the whole Russian ' Nation, to be sullied by Actions which would de- ' stroy the glorious Edifice raised by that great Prince. ' The Reputation of the Russian Arms is another Thing ' which makes it impossible to comply with Sweden's ' Demands, and tyes up the Empress's Hands in such ' a Manner, that far from ceding Provinces or Towns, ' her Dignity will not even permit her to give up ' an Inch of Territory, &c.

From the Head Quarters of the Austrian Army at Olmutz in Moravia, April 24.

Yesterday very early in the Morning we receiv'd Advice that the Prussians had abandon'd the City of Olmutz the Day before, and were retreating towards Sternberg with great Precipitation to the Number of about 14,000 Men. Upon this Advice the Army resum'd its March, and a large Detachment of Hussars with some Waraldins were sent out to harrass the Enemy's Rear Guard. We found here several Pieces of Cannon and Provisions enough for our Army for six Weeks.

P. S. We have this Moment receiv'd Advice that the Prussians have likewise abandon'd Sternberg, and are retiring in all Haste into Silesia.

Vienna, April 25. Yesterday the Court receiv'd News by a Courier from Moravia, that our Hussars having enter'd Neustadt, kill'd there 800 of the Enemy, and made 100 Prisoners, and that a very fine Magazine was found in that Town.

Glatz in Bohemia, April 26. The Garrison of the Castle of this City being in Want of Provisions, and Water especially, has at last surrender'd to the Prussians, after a Blockade of several Months. This Garrison, consisting of 432 Men, is to march out to Morrow with the Honours of War, and will be conducted to the Austrian Army. This Fortress is built on a Rock, which is almost inaccessible on every Side.

Breslau, April 26. According to the last Letters from Olmutz, a Body of 100 Gendarms having been attack'd in the Night in the Village of Senitz, by 700 Austrian Hussars, who set Fire to the Village, they attempted to cut their Way through the Enemy, but were repulsed; however, being joined by some fresh Troops, sent to their Relief, they made a second Effort, defeated the Hussars, and took a great many of them Prisoners.

Hague, April 29. Upon the Resolution taken by our Republick to regulate her Motions by those of France, and consequently make her Troops encamp since the French Court is doing the same, the Marquess de Fenelon went to the President of the Week the 27th Instant, and very smartly represented to him, that this Step would infallibly give Umbrage to his Court; that if she march'd Troops to Flanders there was no other Design in it but to oppose the Schemes of the Court of London, who had resolv'd to assemble an Army in the Low Countries; that if their High Mightinesses had the least Inclination to preserve a good Understanding with his Most Christian Majesty, they never could suffer Foreign Troops to come into his Dominions; that, on the contrary, they seem to promote it, and even to be on the Point of leaguing with the British Ministry, who, under the Pretext of restoring the Ballance of Europe by an Alliance which they are actually meditating, will kindle up a War which may prove altogether as burthensome to the Republick as a Neutrality would be advantageous to her; and that the last Propolals he made to the States General, in the Name of his Court, were such as ought not to be rejected. To all which the President answer'd, that if the States caused their Troops to encamp, it was not done with a View to give France any Umbrage, but merely to exercise their new Levies, whose Service will be wanted, if the Affairs of Europe should take such a Turn as might become prejudicial to the Interest of the Republick; that as to the British Troops in question, their High Mightinesses could not oppose their coming over without dissolving the strict Friendship and Alliance which has so long subsisted between the Maritime Powers; that such a Disunion would be prejudicial to them, as it might give their secret Enemies an Opportunity to execute their Designs against them; that, moreover, the States General were fully resolv'd to maintain their Independence as they have hitherto done, and not to sign any Treaty tending to a formal Neutrality, because such a Step would tye up their Hands, and put it out of their Power to give any Assistance to their antient Allies, who might, perhaps, be then overwhelm'd on all Sides; and that the French Court ought to be more than satisfy'd with the Republick's Inaction at a Juncture when she might reap great Advantages from a Diversion of his Most Christian Majesty's Troops.

The Marquess de Fenelon withdrew when he had got this Answer, and only said, That he would inform the King his Master of their High Mightinesses Behaviour to him, and that he plainly perceiv'd they were ready to come to a Rupture with his Court. The next Day his Excellency sent away an Express to Paris with Dispatches relating to the Subject of his Conference with the President.

Hanover, May 4. The first Instant a Courier arriv'd here from London with the King's Orders for augmenting the Troops of this Electorate with 6000 Men. It is said that Mr. Guy Dickens, who is appointed Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of Stockholm, is charg'd to make some very extraordinary Propolals to his Swedish Majesty.

Hague, May 8. The Duke of Aremberg has settled every Thing with the British Embassador here relating to the Army which, in case of Need, is to be form'd near Dendermond by the English and Austrian Troops. The Duke designs to stay in this City 'till he hears that some of the British Troops are actually landed in the Netherlands.

Paris, May 9. The last Letters from Languedoc and Provence bring an Account of the English Fleet under the Command of Admiral Haddock being upon those Coasts.

IRELAND.

Dublin, April 27. By the Dolphin, Capt. Geldar, who arriv'd here on Sunday last from Barbadoes, we hear, that the 10th of March he left that Island; the Captain of the Severn Man of War, that had been there in order to refit, had impress'd near 300 Men to navigate her, and sail'd at the same time with the Dolphin from Barbadoes: They kept Company till they left the Trade-Winds; and Capt. Geldar believes, by the Course the Men of War then steer'd, that they were going to Lisbon. When the Severn came to Barbadoes, she was wrought by Portuguese from Brazil, there being but 28 English Seamen alive: There were well on board, the two Lieutenants of Marines, Fitzgerald and Downey, or Downing, with only three Soldiers out of the two Companies shipp'd on board her.

Capt. Geldar further adds, That the Scarborough Man of War of 20 Guns, Capt. Lisle, came in there from a Cruize, three Days before, in which he sunk a Snow of 16 Carriage and several Swivel Guns, and upwards of 200 Men, after an Engagement of four Hours and an Half. Capt. Lisle tore open her Side the first Broad-side he gave her; but she being so much above his Number in Men, he did not think it safe to board her. She damag'd the Scarborough very much in her Rigging and Masts, at which they kept a constant Fire, attempting to disable her to work; and at last the Scarborough could not hoist out a Boat. Two Days afterwards he gave Chace to a Sloop of Force, which run ashore on the Windward Part of Porto Rico, where she directly fell to pieces, and her Men perish'd.

His Behaviour having given Cauſe of Suſpicion they ſtopp'd him, and oblig'd him to give an Account of himſelf, which he did, but in a very indifferent manner; however as nothing could be prov'd they let him go; tho' not before they had ſent to ſome Perſons of the ſame Buſineſs, to enquire whether they knew any thing of him; they all agreed, that at different Times a Man had come, and behaved in the ſame manner as above related, and that ſoon after they miſs'd Goods, but none could be poſitive as to him; he ſaid his Name was Roſs.———We inſert this to caution People againſt theſe worſt ſort of Rogues.
